FOUNDATIONS TA SEMINAR #6

Teaching Beyond the Syllabus

We all know they are essential and we try to incorporate them in our tutorials, yet we often find many undergraduate students struggle with them. Core academic skills such as critical thinking, academic writing, note taking, and research require a lot of practice and guidance. How do we incorporate such skills effectively and consistently in our tutorials? And what are some of the resources available at York and elsewhere that can help polish those skills? This workshop is designed to serve as a structured brainstorming session to identify core academic skills and discuss effective strategies for incorporating them in our tutorial plans.

Facilitated by Dina Taha, Senior Teaching Assistant Program

12:30-2pm, Thursday February 8, S752 Ross.

While all TAs are welcome to join us, only NEW first time Foundations TAs attending this session will be paid one hour compensation at the CUPE overload rate. You can be paid up to 7 hrs total for attending approved workshops. This workshop is also part of a workshop series on effective teaching in the Department of Sociology.

Please RSVP John Simoulidis, Foundations Coordinator, sims@yorku.ca
